Brittany Aquamarine

- Originally from Ohio, Brittany Aquamarine is a California-based singer-songwriter who believes that music is an amazing way to connect with oneself. Expressing intimate guitar, piano and warm soothing vocals, she explores a vulnerability with an ethereal sound: Mystic Soulfolk and Ethereal Grooves. She is influenced by Björk, Tori Amos, Portishead, Joni Mitchell and Sarah MacLachlan and loves to share her passion for music and her creative style.
- Her song, The Immovable Force, was discussed on the Supernova Support Podcast, a female duo team (Karen Joy Brown and Katie Phillips) that hosts female and femme based open mics, song salons and songwriting hours. The song's lyrics mention, "Moving around like a dance so not to defend the same thing pointed out right back again." Karen mentioned, "It's an immovable force, but yet, it's moving and that's what is so fascinating about it. The movement is constant and that's what kind of makes it immovable. That's what I was trying to hint at with Brittany's style-it's deep, it's calm and it's expansive." Regarding the songwriting, Katie stated, "You're demonstrating with the musicality, with the lyrics, with the performance, that sometimes there isn't an answer right away…It's still an exploration. It's comforting and it's wise, and even though it doesn't give me an answer, it gives me a blueprint."
- Past performances include playing at the Railroad Square Music Festival, a free festival with an attendance of around 7,000 people and at Sebastopol Porchfest, an annual event where bands play on front porches and on driveways. These outdoor festivals provide a great opportunity to perform original songs, however Brittany also enjoys playing covers. She most recently played at Monte Rio's Boho Manor lounge for Dolly Day. This included an opportunity to play songs by women artists such as Dolly Parton, Gillian Welch, and The Highwomen among others.
- Trio shows include bass player, Espen Skaar, who began playing with the band in August 2026, and drummer, Greg "Ceni". Espen adds funk, jazz and melodic elements and on drums, Ceni holds the rhythmic pulse and groove.
- Brittany's music journey began at age 5 with piano lessons and choir classes. She began songwriting on guitar as a young adult. She has a certificate in Audio and Recording Production and took Jazz Improv and Jazz Theory courses focused on piano.
